Rich respected dr william gardiner 67 has killed himself after two months of marriage to 26 year old nurse nan dunlop leaving a cryptic note and a fortune to his devastated bride so poor nan is not only a widow but is also blamed for gardiner s suicide by just about everybody including the doctor s lawyer friend victor hemmings only dr tad collins a onetime student of the suicidal doctor seems to see nan s side of things and when nan decides that the suicide note suggests some blackmail behind the scenes she determines to solve the mystery and clear herself of responsibility she moves to washington to track down and talk to everyone from her husband s past all of whom seem blessed with near total recall his old girlfriends one of whom has suffered a stroke his old medical associates who reminiscence about a research project that was abruptly ended his alcoholic sister living in joyless affluence the upshot nan begins to see a pattern of a grievous wrong in her husband s past as well as a present danger to herself solid intricate plotting but the narration all through the eyes and thoughts of spunky yet humorless nan bogs things down in a fussy fancy melodramatic style and this is less charming overall than borgenicht s other recent more offbeat mysteries
